Problem to be solved:

The human body contains approximately 2 grams of potassium per kilogram. Assuming that $^{40}\text{K}$ is the only contribution to radioactivity in the body, calculate your own body activity. Making reasonable approximations, calculate the effective dose that you will get from your own radioactivity during one year.